

As federal, state, and local budget deficits balloon out of control, the IRS and other taxing authorities are working harder to chase every tax dollar. The IRS is hiring over 80,000 new agents and sends out thousands more notices than in past years.

Your odds of getting audited or other unwelcome correspondence are climbing every year. Moreover, like it or not, the IRS assumes their conclusions are correct unless you prove otherwise. Responding to IRS written notices can be expensive and time-consuming, and responding to an actual audit can mean real financial disruption.
